Risk Assessment

Risk Assessments as required by the Management of Health & Safety at Work Regulations 1999

Risk Assessments

Employers and self-employed people have a legal obligation to identify the risks to workers and anyone else, for example members of the public, who may be affected by their work activity, and to take appropriate action to counter these risks.

Employers and self-employed people should conduct a 'risk assessment' to help them fulfil this legal obligation. Risk assessments can be carried out by an external source if there is no one in the company with the required level of competence.

We can carry out risk assessments in all areas of work including:

All areas of Construction; Offices; Factories, Warehouses;

Petro-chemical industry; Pharmaceuticals

We also specialise in Fire Risk Assessments.

Initial draft package £150—£300

We can develop a tailored SSoW for you during a risk assessment process or as an off the shelf package dependant upon your specific requirements
